

BROWN TO GREEN:

LOW-CARBON DEVELOPMENT OF THE G20 AND CHINA

Workshop in Beijing,
1 September 2016

Hosted by:
Energy Research Institute of the National Development and Reform Commission,
WWF China, Energy Foundation China, and Climate Transparency

Venue: China Hall of Science and Technology, Room B 204
No. 3 Fuxing Road, Haidian District, Beijing

Purpose of the Conference

Three days before the G20 Summit in China, this conference will inform and discuss the current performance of G20 countries in transitioning to a low-carbon development with a particular focus on China. The conference convenes important Chinese experts from academia, civil society, government and the finance sector as well as international climate and finance experts and the media. In particular, the workshop serves the following purpose:

- Inform participants on the current decarbonisation trend of the G20 states by releasing the 2016 G20 Report of Climate Transparency “Brown to Green”.
- Discuss the role of green investments.
- Exchange views on the role of the G20 as a group in climate action.
- Discuss with Chinese experts China’s national climate action in comparison to other G20 countries.

About Climate Transparency

Climate Transparency is an open global consortium with a shared mission to stimulate a 'race to the top' in climate action through enhanced transparency. For this purpose, comprehensive, comparable and credible information about the climate action of countries is spread by bringing together the most important actors in assessing and communicating climate action for the benefit of key influencers and decision makers.
